"I'd like to test the theory that money can't buy you happiness."

Bike Ride

The first time my son was on a bike with training wheels, I shouted, "Step back on the pedals and the bike will brake!"

He nodded but still rode straight into a bush.

"Why didn't you push back on the pedals?" I asked, helping him up.

"You said if I did, the bike would break."

School Bus

One stormy spring morning an obviously anxious mother called the school office to ask if her son's bus had gotten there safely.

She was asked, "What is your son's name and what grade is he in?"

A giggle followed a pause. "Oh, my son's not a student. He's the bus driver."

Sick Dog

When our client's dog lapped up anti-freeze, the veterinarian I work for ordered a unique treatment, an IV drip mixing fluids with vodka. "Go buy the cheapest bottle you can find," he told me.

"Believe it or not," I said, "this is for a sick dog."

As I was leaving, the next customer plunked down two bottles of muscatel and announced, "These are for my cats."

Whispering

My sister had been ill, so I called to see how she was doing. My ten-year-old niece answered the phone. "Hello," she whispered.

"Hi, honey. How's your mother?" I asked.

"She's sleeping," she answered, again in a whisper.

"Did she go to the doctor?"

"Yes. She got some medicine," my niece said softly.

"Well, don't wake her up. Just tell her I called. What are you doing, by the way?"

Again in a soft whisper, she answered, "Practicing my trumpet."

Father's Day

It was different when we were kids. In second grade, a teacher came in and gave us all a lecture about not smoking, and then they sent us over to arts and crafts to make ash-trays for Father's Day.

Courtroom

Heckling in the courtroom had constantly interrupted the trial, and the judge had had enough. "The next person who interrupts the proceeding will be thrown out of my court!" he said severely, at which the defendant yelled, "Hooray!"
