Senior Moment

Leaving the store, I couldn't find my keys. They weren't in my pockets. Suddenly I realized I must have left them in the car. Frantically, I headed for the parking lot. My husband has scolded me many times for leaving my keys in the car's ignition. He's afraid that the car could be stolen. As I looked around the parking lot, I realized he was right. The parking lot was empty. I immediately called the police. I gave them my location, confessed that I had left my keys in the car, and that it had been stolen.

Then, I made the most difficult call of all to my husband, "I left my keys in the car, and it's been stolen."

There was a moment of silence. I thought the call had been disconnected, but then I heard his voice. "Are you kidding me?" he barked, "I dropped you off!"

Now it was my turn to be silent. Embarrassed, I said, "Well, come and get me."

He retorted, "I will, just as soon as I convince this cop that I didn't steal your car!"

Exaggeration

When I was in elementary school, I learned about exaggeration.

I had like ten thousand tests on it and my teacher would kill me if I didn't spell it right.

Instructions

The instructions and fine print in the manual for my new electronic humidity sensor intimidated me, so I delayed setting it up. Once I finally began, my fear was eliminated when I read the fifth hint in the four-page instruction manual, which stated: "Under no circumstances should you let it get to you! It's only a computer-like device and you cannot screw it up unless you throw it out the window, in which case it will not be under warranty!"

Matchmaker

Barb, a local waitress, decided to put her matchmaking skills to the test with our mutual friend Mike. She figured that Sandy, another customer who seemed to have much in common with Mike, would be an ideal date.

One day Mike came into the restaurant when Sandy was also there. Barb dragged Mike over to Sandy's table and introduced the two. Then she watched in amazement, as Mike put his arm around the young woman and said in his best mock-seductive voice, "Helloooh, Sandy."

"You guys know each other?" Barb asked.

"We sure do," said Mike. "She's my sister."
